The Third Digital Health Symposium at UNGA 78

September 26th & 27th in New York City

The Innovation Value Institute are thrilled to announce the upcoming third Digital Health Symposium as part of the 78th United Nations General Assembly (UNGA), taking place on September 26th & 27th 2023 in New York City.

We have made remarkable progress in health as a global society, more than doubling life expectancy in just over two centuries. Public health and clinical innovations have been major contributors to this improvement. But across the world, healthcare systems are facing a major crisis caused by a perfect storm of factors – rapidly rising healthcare costs, clinician burnout and attrition, and demographics going in the wrong direction. Since 2018, there are more people over 65 than under the age of five in the world. Equally half the world do not have access to affordable care and for the half that do, it is becoming increasingly unaffordable.

IVI Autumn Webinar Series: Data Value: Moving beyond a monetary value Sept 28th at 3pm (GMT+1)

The In the digital age, organizations have become increasingly dependent on data. As part of our digital transformation, it has evolved from being just a mere means of storing information to being a critical asset that can be used to drive innovation, increase profitability, and gain insights. We frequently hear about unlocking the potential of data value, but is the interpretation of data value changing? How do we measure the outcomes of data? How does this impact you or your organisation? It is an opportune time to address these questions with our panel of experts as we delve into moving beyond monetary value and assess the impact on a wider economy and society as a whole.
